

Let's Make Toronto a "No Sweat" City!

There are many reports of poor working conditions in the global garment industry, including child labour, poverty wages, forced overtime, and unsafe working conditions;

The City of Toronto spends millions of dollars every year on uniforms for police officers, firefighters, sanitation workers and other city employees;

The City of Toronto can help eliminate sweatshop abuses in our city and around the world by purchasing uniforms and other apparel that are not made under sweatshop conditions:

Therefore we, the undersigned, call on Toronto City Council to adopt a "No Sweat" purchasing policy, which would ensure that clothing and other textiles products purchased by the City are made under humane working conditions by companies that do not exploit their workers.
